

GERARD MAY GET GERMAN REPLY TODAY

ANSWER TO WILSON'S NOTE ON LUSITANIA DISASTER MAY BE CABLED TONIGHT.

WARNING ON SHIPPING

German Government Sends State Department A Message Urging Greater Caution in Traversing Naval War Zone.

Washington, May 29.—Germany's reply to the American note regarding the destruction of the Lusitania was being awaited today by the administration officials with keen interest. It was to be handed to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin today, who it was believed here would immediately cable it to the state department. Unofficial information received here said the reply would be given to the German press tomorrow for publication. It probably will be given out here for publication at the same time.

Warn American Shippers.

An urgent warning to American shipping against traversing the naval war zone incautiously and to have all neutral markings displayed as conspicuously as possible, including illumination at night, was communicated to the state department today by the German government through the American embassy at Berlin. The German warning announced in the following statement made public by the state department:

Is Notified.

"The American ambassador at Berlin has been informed by the German foreign office that in view of the fact that during the last few weeks it has repeatedly occurred that neutral ships have been sunk in the waters designated as an area of maritime war by the German admiralty on February 4, 1915, and especially in one case where the sinking was traceable to attacks by German submarines which took the neutral ship for an English vessel in the darkness on account of the inadequate illumination of its neutral markings, it recommends that American shipping circles be again be warned against traversing the area of maritime war incautiously, and also be urged to make the neutral markings as plain as possible and especially to have them illuminated promptly and sufficiently at night."

To Stand Firm.

On the eve of Germany's reply to the American note in the sinking of the Lusitania, there are indications that President Wilson will make the position that if Germany wishes to conduct a long diplomatic negotiation she shall suspend submarine warfare on American ships or those carrying American lives.

It was expected here that the German note might be delivered any hour today by Ambassador Gerard. The first official intimation in London gave no intimation of the situation and officials were of the opinion that should the document be delivered to the German government today, it might reach Washington by the morning of Monday. They had no official intimation of its contents.

Three Weeks Ago.

The sinking of three weeks, however, since the Lusitania was torpedoed, has not diminished attention in high official quarters where the conviction prevails that President Wilson's demand for Germany should make early disclosure of her submarine policy that America lives should be lost.

The admission of the German admiral that a German submarine torpedoed the American steamer Guilford without warning, taken to confirm the conclusion of the Washington government, reached before the Lusitania note was sent.

Marine Statement.

Reports from Berlin that the German submarine commanders have stated that as to the neutral or belligerent character of the Guilford it was dangerous to decide, because she was the companion of two British patrol boats, was pointed out by officials as proof of their contention that German submarine commanders, without visit and search, or at least warning, are likely to subject all American vessels to the same treatment as belligerent craft.

Gerard's Dispatch.

Ambassador Gerard reported today that while the German reply to the American note yesterday had been delivered to him, he did not know it contained a request for agreement on the fact in the case of the Lusitania. Ambassador Gerard has been sending dispatches regularly concerning the probable contents of the German note. This has been guarded with great care inasmuch as the American government, it was said, was not to be decided on the details of its reply and officials did not desire to complicate the situation by any personal conjecture as to what the note contained before the full text was available.

Ask Agreement.

The German government, however, has decided to ask an agreement upon the fact of the Lusitania case, whether she was an auxiliary cruiser on the British naval list and carried a cargo of ammunition and explosives, and whether she was armed with guns mounted or dismounted—was included in some of the Ambassador's dispatches in line with fresh reports from the German capital.

No Comment.

Officials were unwilling to make any comment on the reception of such a proposal but well informed quarters, however, it is believed the German government's statement that an understanding of the fact will be met with the statement of the American government information and counter proposal that while the discussion is in progress there shall be no abatement of attacks on American vessels or lives.

BIND TWO AMERICAS BY STEAMSHIP LINES

FAST MERCHANT LINE BETWEEN AMERICAS WOULD CLOSE CLOSER RELATIONSHIP.

COMMITTEE IN REPORT

Representatives Report Proposals to Cause Commercial Trade Exchange Between Countries Interested.

Washington, Pan-America, May 29.—Plans for steamship lines between the United States and South America—the one element, which all delegates to the Pan-American financial conference agree is essential to closer relations between the Americas—were presented today by the transportation committee. A permanent committee of representatives of the United States, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Ecuador and Peru to work for the development of the plans were recommended. Two sub-committees were reported, differing only in proposals of procedure were submitted.

Committee Proposes.

One committee proposed a fast line of ten thousand-ton steamers between the United States and Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo and Buenos Aires, capable of making the voyage to Rio in fifteen days.

That as a compensation for services rendered, such ships be exempt for five years from all fiscal charges and enjoy all facilities granted any other vessel.

Bids would be called for not later than December 31, 1915, would be answered upon within three months and, if possible, awarded to the builders who give earliest delivery. The note and other American governments would agree on the division and expense.

Other System.

It was agreed between the other members and delegate Veraera of Chile that there should be two lines of fast steamers, one to serve Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina, and the other for Ecuador, Peru and Chile.

Delegate Alzate, while concurring in the report, did not sign it for lack of authorization from his government, as was the case with delegate Gonzalez of Ecuador.

Other Process.

Delegate Veraera, in a separate report, made these proposals:

Organization of a corporation with a stock offered for public subscription and an annual dividend of 5 percent, taken by the United States and Latin American governments; proportion to be agreed upon later.

That the corporation be organized under the New York laws, that the steamers shall be registered in different countries in proportion to capital subscribed; that vessels of 5,000 tons minimum and a minimum speed of sixteen miles an hour; that the directors be chosen by subscribing countries in proportion to their holdings.

The reports were presented to the conference this morning by the transportation committee with the recommendation that "it is the unanimous conviction of the committee that plans should be adopted as will merit most speedy, established direct, effective and permanent transportation facilities between the United States and the republics of South and Central America."

Miss Peet is Woman of Ideals—Will Cook Good Things and Serve Them to Classes—Will Bake Ice Cream on Wednesday Night.

The Better Foods Better Homes movement has reached Rock county. In this work there is no more efficient leader or entertaining speaker than Florence M. Peet. She has had opportunities of studying the subject of food and its influence on individuals, homes and communities such as do not fall to the lot of most women. With unusual training as a housekeeper and expert cook, she feels that it is her duty to pass along to others the knowledge that has meant so much to her. She believes that all women should train for housekeeping and home-making as a man trains for his life work and therefore endorses domestic science teaching in the schools. In her travels in the interests of the Better Foods Better Homes movement, Miss Peet has visited all parts of the country, and she pays a tribute to the mid-west in saying that she thinks domestic science is taught more universally and better in the schools here than in any other locality.

In arranging to again bring this Better Foods Better Homes movement to Janesville, the Gazette had in mind to secure a woman whose personality would win a host of friends for herself, the cause she represents, and in

FINANCIAL TROUBLES HITS MINOR LEAGUES

TROUBLES OVER LACK OF MONEY EXPERIENCED IN THE BUSH LEAGUES ALSO.

WORLD TRACK RECORDS

Annual Championship Track Meet of Amateur Athletics Held at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Today.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) New York, May 29.—That financial troubles in baseball are not confined to the leagues is shown by records compiled from the minor league statistics of 1914 and 1915. In a list comprising twenty-two leagues of various classifications below the majors, the records show that more than half reduced either the salary or players' fund, or both, during the past winter. In no case was there an increase over the 1914 regulations in either the player or salary limit.

Reductions in the number of players to be carried ranged from two to five per club, which in the case of a six-club league aggregated from twelve to thirty. The monthly salary roll dropped from one hundred to eight hundred dollars per month per club, with the average ranging close to five hundred. Taking five hundred dollars as a general average and five months as the average season, the saving per league figured at $2,500 and for a six-club league $15,000 for the season.

The following description of a baseball game, played recently in Australia, has been native and American resident players, and the idea of an Australian baseball vernacular:

"The Americans mounted the box first, treating Marre to face the attack, allowing him to walk to first. Casey followed, and Heanerd's error enabled him to reach second in safety. Caswell then threw wildly at first base, and before the ball was recovered Marre and Casey had sprinted across the plate. Tucker, meanwhile, had made good on the diamond, but Dragg's fly, which was muffed, gave the fielders an opportunity of cutting the run. Marre, at third, then grounded into a play, making three runs for the innings. Australia sent Heanerd to the box first, but a put out at first base was wasted. Marre followed, and Marre's bad throw saw him safely landed at first. Golby then came with a brilliant hit right out to left field, bringing Comber home. Spiller, who had been missed by the catcher, made his way to third and a passed ball completed the distance for him. In the next term America could not get off the box, and then Australia made a determined effort to draw level in the succeeding term. Heanerd, brilliantly smashed to the left garden for a two-bagger, and a passed ball sent him on to third. Another passed ball completed the journey for him, and the score read 2 all. Spiller was indulging in daring pilfering on the diamond, and a well judged steal gave him second base, from where he was sent flying across the plate on a Golby's clutch, which Casey allowed to go past. Golby had reached third when Lambert went in to bat, and the Leichardt player brought him home on a fine outfield hit, which produced two bags. Caswell then brought Lambert home, making four runs for the session."

Golf Entry Blanks

The entry blanks for the National Golf Championship, to be played at Bannockburn Golf Club, Hillsdale, New Jersey, June 15-18, show that the first two days of the tournament will be devoted to qualifying rounds and the last two days to championship play. The entry list closes on June 8 and the first qualifying round will open at 8:30 a. m. June 15, with half of the total entry competing, from which thirty-two are to qualify.

On June 16 the second half of the entry will play thirty-six holes under similar conditions. On Thursday and Friday, June 17 and 18, will be devoted to thirty-six hole championship rounds, the total score being the score for the two days. In case of a tie, such as determined between Ray, Vardon and Outback, a Brooklyn in 1913, the play-off round of eighteen holes will be held on Saturday, June 19. Prize money to the extent of $900 and a gold medal emblematic of the championship will be distributed among the first ten players. In case one or more amateur players are included in this list suitable trophies in plate will replace the cash prizes.

Amateur Records

The finals of the fortieth annual championship track and field meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America will be held at Franklin Field, University of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia, today. The performances of a number of the college athletes in dual meets this spring indicate they given fair ways to decide a fast track, several existing records are likely to be broken. The events in which new times or distances considered probable are: 440 yards; 880 yards and two mile run, the latter being the field events include running, high and broad jumps and the hammer throw.

Need Tennis Coaches

Increasing demands for tennis coaches, either amateur or professional, has caused the United States National Lawn Tennis association to turn its attention to this new phase of the sport. Clubs in all parts of the country are now trying to secure the services of professional coaches and since there are but few available, amateur experts are being requested to act as coaches. As a result of this situation President Robert D. Wrenn of the U. S. N. L. T. A. has been obliged to call attention to the definition of an amateur and rule on several cases involving the principles of the definition. The rule reads:

"An amateur is one who has not played, instructed, pursued or assisted in the pursuit of tennis or other athletic exercise as a means of livelihood or for gain or other emolument." One case in particular called for a ruling where the proprietor of a large summer hotel offered board and lodging free to an amateur in return for the latter's services in arranging hotel tournaments and caring in a general way for the game and courts during the vacation season. In another a question arose regarding the status of a player tendered the position of a coach to a school team which carried no salary or other emolument. In the first case President Wrenn ruled that acceptance of a position with such a summer hotel would undoubtedly lay the amateur open to charges of professionalism. In the second it was suggested that the player place his offer before the executive committee for final judgment.

Sam Wurbarger, manager of Jack Dillon, writes that Jack is ready at any time to meet Jim Coffey. He says: "Here are the reasons we are entitled to the bout. Jack stopped Young Welnert in Philadelphia in two rounds a short time ago. He beat Jim Lynn at Kansas City badly in ten rounds and had him down for the count five times. Just a month ago he beat Gubcoat Smith every round at Milwaukee, so why not Coffey?"

"What impresses me a great deal about you, Mr. Mollwitz," said the erudite young lady to the Cincinnati Red star, "is your altitudinal longitude." Mr. Mollwitz flushed, and made earnest disclaimer. "Honest to Pete, ma'am, you're mistaken," he protested. "I had a cousin in Germany whose name as mine, and he was pitched once for something of the kind, but it wasn't me, ma'am, no, indeed!"

Tomorrow is "Der Tag." Thousands of devotees of the piscatorial art will seek their favorite fish haunts and proceed to either material for that popular piece of fiction, "The One That Got Away." For about seven months they have been barred from participation in their favorite sport—partly by laws and partly by the elements—and they are going to try and make up for it all in one day. The closed season on most game fish in this state only extends, by law, from March 1 to May 30, but anglers are practically inaccessible from the last of October to the time when the law starts in and prevents it. As a result, many of our prominent citizens have been spending long hours during the winter days of spring, tilted back in their o'ce chairs, gazing out of the windows with unseeing eyes, and catching all the fish in the world—in their minds.

Fish Plentiful.
The fish are reported to be unusually plentiful in the lakes and rivers this season, and anglers from the numbers of anglers who are preparing to celebrate the opening of the season tomorrow, the water in those places is due to be lowered several inches by the enormous quantities of fish which will be landed, unconsciously from their native element. Fishermen will be allowed but fifteen black, yellow or Osage bass, and these will have to be at least ten inches long. Any bass less than that length must be returned to the water without injury. No game fish may be transported between March 1 and June 1. The trout season opened April 15, and will close Sept. 1. No more than 45 trout may be caught in inland waters during one day, and these must be at least six inches long.

Just as a matter of precaution, every wise fisherman will provide himself with a copy of the fish and game laws of Wisconsin as a part of his equipment.

District Laws.
In Elk Green lake, in Green Lake county, the season for black or Osage bass does not open before July 1. In this lake, in Ashland county, June 15 to December 15 for all fish; in Mirror lake and Dell creek, June 15 to Dec. 15 for all game fish; in the Silver River lake, Birch lake, Silver lake, and Lake Koshong, in Forest county, pickeree are protected until "They say every big family has a black sheep. Well that's the way of the world. Even among Diamond Tires there's about one out of every hundred that isn't just what it ought to be."

—Mister Squeegie

We don't judge families by their black sheep.

We judge the black sheep by their families. And the better the family the blacker the sheep. So when a Diamond Tire gets into trouble we think more strongly about it because it comes from such a good family.

But isn't it a wonderful record—about one Diamond Tire in every hundred a black sheep—

Oh, not really deep-dyed black—let's say it's sort of a dark gray sheep actually.

The difficulty is that Diamond Tires can only be compared with Diamond Tires. There's no other standard of comparison.

Send for our book of letters from dealers who sold Diamond Tires in 1914.

It tells how more than 99 out of every 100 of the more than half million Diamond Tires sold last year gave maximum service at minimum mileage cost. It is yours for the asking.

Sturgeon are protected in all the waters of this state until Feb. 1921. The season for trout is open since April 15 and closes Sept. 1. Nobody can have more than forty-five trout, caught in inland waters, in possession. Trout cannot be sold or shipped, but must be accompanied by the owner. Twenty pounds, or two fish of any weight, may be shipped to points within this state once during any seven days. Shipping of game fish out of the state is prohibited, except by persons who are in possession of a non-resident license.

Trout cannot be caught less than six inches in length; black or Osage bass not less than ten inches and not more than fifteen fish, and pike not less than one pound. It is unlawful to have more than twenty-five pounds of bullheads, taken from the waters of Beaver Dam lake or Fox lake, in Dodge county, in possession.

List of Game Fish.
According to our laws, fish are classified as "game fish" and "rough fish." Game are: Any brook trout, rainbow or brown trout, grayling, black bass, Osage bass, green or yellow bass, silver bass, white bass, rock, strawberry and calico bass, crappie, pike, catfish, muskellunge, sturgeon and pickerel. All fish not classed as "game fish" are known and classed as "rough fish," except in Lake Winnebago, Lake Butte des Morts and Pecos, Fox river and Wolf Lake, Winnebago county, perch are classed as game.

Angling or trolling, with not more than five lines to a person, and not more than one hook or trolling spoon (line) to each line, is the only lawful method for catching game fish.

A spear may be used in day time for catching rough fish only. It is unlawful to leave a fishline in the water unattended or to use a minnow dip net more than four feet in diameter or a minnow seine more than twenty feet in length and five feet in depth for the purpose of taking rough fish minnows for bait only.

There is also a closed season for crawfish (crabs) during the breeding period from March 1 to July 10. Packages containing fish or game must be labeled so to disclose the name and address of the shipper and the name and address to whom shipped, the number of pounds of each variety of fish and the number of each variety of game animals or birds contained therein, and the shipper shall give a signed statement to the receiving agent or common carrier, stating the high line or she is the owner of said shipment.

Fishermen's Paradise.
Wisconsin is a paradise for fishermen. Our many northern lakes are alive with all kinds of game fish and the brooks and streams are full of the finest and gamiest trout. People who cannot afford to go up to Eagle River, Three lakes, Pelican lake, Tomahawk lake or other lakes in our northern wildernesses to have fun with the kind of said waters, the muskellunge (muskellunge) will find sport in catch black bass or Osage bass, walleyed pike, pickerel, white bass and crappies in the waters of Lake Winnebago, Lake Butte des Morts, Lake Winnebago or Lake Poygan, Pickaway lake or Fox lake. Good catches of Osage bass, pickerel, silver bass are made every year in lakes close to Milwaukee in Waukesha county. Good catches of white bass were made in Pewaukee lake for the last two years, as the lake was stocked with said fish several years ago from our state hatcheries.

MORRIS MILLER

"Two years ago," says Tom Clarke, "the Giants made an awful blunder about the spectators in a certain part of the Philadelphia bleachers; out in center getting up, planting themselves on the sky-line, waving flags and coats, and otherwise making a wild, wild, tossing background against which the visitors found it tough stuff to do any batting. The league made the Philadelphia clear out that section of the bleachers, so that clubs haven't been bothered that way since. Way don't they make some ruling about the fans in the Boston bleachers? On bright and sunny afternoons, the Boston fans all rock their faces back and forth when the visitors are batting; the sun glances off the rows of spectacles, the dancing reflectors throw those thousands of eyeglasses are an awful handicap, on the level!"

The fact that St. Louis is desirous of getting one of Cleveland's two southpaw pitchers is another example of the uncertainty of baseball. Only a year ago the Browns were supposed to be the best fixed club in the circuit when it came to left-handers, having three stars in Hamilton, Cleveland and Wellman. Today, however, Rickey finds himself able to call upon only one portly slider, Wellman. Hamilton has been suspended and Cleveland has been of but little use since 1913, winning only one game in 1914.

Cleveland is not looking for a first baseman. It is perfectly satisfied

Such was the information conveyed by Mr. Somers when he turned down the offer of the St. Louis Browns to give Cleveland a first sacker, pre-eminently Dick Kauffman, for Pitcher Fred Cooney, "in the first place," said Somers, "we don't need a first sacker. In the second place, we do not intend to trade Cooney or any of our younger players. We are not at all interested in the St. Louis proposition."

The three Boston bosses frankly admit that they are not satisfied with the way their world's champions have been going and would gladly make some sort of trade with the Red Sox if one could be mapped out that would suit all parties concerned.

Here's a hot one from Decatur, Ill.: "McCabe hurled excellent ball and deserved a shut-out, as Rockford made but two earned runs." Now, will any one tell us how a pitcher is deserving of a shut-out when two runs are earned off his delivery.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The significance of Memorial day is becoming more and more of a memory every year, for with each recurring anniversary the ranks are depleted, and the old army is represented today by a fragment of veterans, sleeping under the burden of years, yet with hearts still young.

With the passing of the army has come the passing of a generation, and but few people are living today who lived through the years of civil strife, yet the history of these exciting years is familiar to all American homes.

To the people in middle life, whose fathers were called upon to make the supreme sacrifice, the events of the war are more intensely real than to the children who read the tragic story, or listen to the grandfather, who lived to tell the tale.

The fact is sometimes deplored that Memorial day has been so largely transformed into a holiday, and young people are sometimes accused of a lack of reverence and appreciation, but this is not the case. Love for humanity finds expression, not at the tomb, but by the fireside, where weary wayfarers patiently wait for the last bugle call.

The Grand Army has marched on and over the brink and the remnant is living on borrowed time. They have outlived their generation, and but for the fact that they are entitled to marked consideration, because of the history of which they are a part, they would receive no more attention than the average pilgrim who has lived out expectancy and is waiting for the summons, close to the edge of time.

All honor to the memory of the men of '61, who gave their lives half a century ago to preserve the Union, and all honor to the veterans who still live to tell the story of hardship and sacrifice. To these survivors should be extended our love and sympathy, as well as our most thoughtful consideration. The time to help people is while they are with us, and this fact is recognized today, more than ever before. While the new generation may find it difficult to mourn at a tomb, whose occupant is a stranger, it has a warm heart for the living.

This human sympathy, after all, is what counts in the every day struggle. It isn't so much the uncovered head, and the flowers at the grave, long covered by the sod. They are tokens of reverence and respect for a memory, but the things which bring comfort to a burdened heart, are the flowers in the lonely room, and the deeds of kindness which help to make the rough places smooth.

The history now being written, so largely in blood, is an unparalleled history, and the day which we are soon to observe as a national anniversary, will be a day of suspense and mourning in millions of homes in the lands across the sea. It means more than sorrow, which is bad enough, for with the sorrow, in many cases, is privation and suffering.

Time has healed the wounds caused by the war of the rebellion, and only the scars remain. Nature has covered the battlefields with a mantle of foliage, and but few evidences exist as reminders of the conflict. The South has been slow to recover from the tragedy of war, but the spirit of bitterness expired with the old generation, and out of the strife has come the freedom to a race and a union which is abiding.

Memorial day should be to America a day of thanksgiving, as well as a day of reverence and respect for the memory of fallen heroes, and especially this year when we have so much to be thankful for.

We enjoy the blessings of internal peace because we had the men who were willing to give up life to secure it. When the life of the nation was threatened, and we are the only nation today which is at peace with all mankind. These are reasons for profound gratitude.

An American writer spent a few days recently in a little city in Germany, where the theatre had been transformed into a hospital, where five hundred wounded men were being cared for. The Red Cross society had placed in charge of the work three American surgeons and a corps of American nurses, and acquaintance with the staff gave the correspondent access to the building.

The story of what he saw, and the interviews with wounded men, is only one of the many chapters of the most brutal war known to history. The men were brought in from the trenches covered with filth and vermin. Many of them were wild with delirium, and made the place hideous as they lived over again the tragedies of war.

One of them, more fortunate than the rest, had his wife as a special nurse. He had been a school teacher in a little town near by. She consoled him by telling him that while his left arm was gone that his right arm was all right, and he would soon be able to go on with his work.

This is only one of four thousand hospitals scattered through the war zone, all crowded to capacity, and this means that from one and a half to two million men are, many of them, crippled for life, if they survive. If you can grasp the thought, supplement it by the fact that the battlefields are cemeteries where a great army of men has perished.

Memorial day, to this fair land, is a day of sacred memories, but to half the world, this year, it is a day of mourning and suffering, such as the world has never known. Every man in the hospital, and every man who has met death on the field, represents more than an individual. The great army of sufferers is composed of the women and children, many of them homeless and destitute, and without hope for the future.

The story of sacrifice and individual suffering will never be written, but the glimpses which come to us, now and then, are faint outlines of its magnitude. Sorrow in the home is magnified when to this is added the agony and hunger, the cup of misery is complete.

A young lady who was a nun in a convent at Louvain, when the city was captured, returned to New York. In a letter recently received in Janesville she tells of some of the horrors which she witnessed. They are almost past belief, and yet authentic.

She says that the women and children were driven along the highways towards Holland like sheep. Babies were born at the roadside and died of exposure. They were finally loaded into freight cars and shipped across the border, and then herded in a stockade to die by slow torture.

The fortunes of war may be responsible for much of the suffering in prison camps and among the refugees, but this makes it none the less real. So while we turn aside to reverence the memory of our dead, long since departed, let us remember that the old world today is one long funeral procession, where mourners wander about the streets, and dire poverty adds to the burden of sorrow.

Little flags, dotting our cemeteries all over the land, mark the resting place of the heroes of '61, and we tread with reverence the sod where they so peacefully sleep, but the heroes, who are falling in battle today, slumber in unmarked graves, which will never be discovered by the loved ones who mourn and suffer.

Time has healed our sorrow, and the book is closed except in memory, but the days to us so peaceful are a nightmare to the uncounted millions whose torture is beyond compare, and who vainly ask the question, "Why?"

When our nation was wrought in twain, every patriotic heart was stirred with enthusiasm. Every man was a free man, and he knew the issues involved. Not so today, where the great armies know not for what they are contending, and where men are driven like brutes to the slaughter. The glory of sacrifice for a cause has some compensation, but the world war is destitute of glory and nothing remains to bring comfort to desolated homes.

Let us thank God reverently that we are not a part of the world's great slaughter house, and as we teach our children to reverence the memory of our Grand Army heroes, let us remind them also of the world-wide sympathy demanded in this year of our Lord nineteen hundred and fifteen.

Our Hymns in Japanese.

One of our eastern contemporaries finds that in a Japanese translation of the gospel hymn, "Rock of Ages, Climb for Me," the literal translation runs, "Very Old Rock, Split for My Benefit."

Our eastern contemporary says it is really appalling to contemplate the form in which some of the other hymns must appear before being exhibited in a translation of translation into an untranslatable language. It is easy to perceive that "Throw Out the Lifeline, a Brother to Save," must become, "Lay Out Very Strong Cord Made of Honorable Other Son of Yours, ennobled, Parents to Rescue," and that "Hold the Fort," must become "Rush Forward Reserve Forces to Repulse Attack of Enemy Upon Position."

Other illustrations might be applied, but we desist.

GINGLE'S JINGLES.

PLAYING THE FIDDLE.

(By Lorin H. Gingles.)

It's nice to fiddle, right you should, to play the fiddle does you good, but if you play when you should work, you waste your time and learn to shirk. But when you're sure you've done your best and know that you deserve a rest, though folks complain as many will, and say that you're a worthless piff; just grab your fiddle, play a tune and you will find out very soon, that you'll feel cheerful, bright and good to shake the blues will be a piff, but when at work forget your play, and put your fiddle right away. Apply yourself with all your soul. Aim to get around and whine and doubt. Just get your fiddle by the gills and fill your carcass full of thrills. If you can't fiddle, you can walk or read a book or have a talk. The fiddles do not all have strings. They're hobbies that with good cheer rings. The fiddling spirit is our need, that from our task we can be freed. Old Nero fiddled, which was sound, while Rome was burning to the ground. He did not fret; he did not stew as you or I no doubt would do. He was no fire department guy, so simply passed the matter by. The man who fiddles never sours, but fiddles during fiddling hours.

Taxi Business Made A Success By Advertising

TELLS HOW ADVERTISING HAS BUILT LIVERY BUSINESS.

Walden W. Shaw and John Hertz Started Taxi Company Eight Years Ago With Ten Used Cars Determined to "Revolutionize, Organize and Advertise."

USE BIG SPACE DAILY IN POOR SEASONS.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

"Eight years ago the taxi cab business was in its earliest infancy—and it didn't give promise of becoming a very lusty one at that, because of certain tendencies and weaknesses it had inherited from the newspaper industry, hack driving, in the way of eccentric price schedules, and so forth."

"So far it has been a question of revolutionizing, organizing and advertising. For of all the lines of business that need newspaper advertising, this very same taxi cab livery business is one of the most dependent on it for real success."

As he spoke, John Hertz finished signing a pile of letters which our entrance had interrupted, delivered them to his secretary, who appeared in answer to his desk bell, and then squaring himself about in his chair, intimating by turning his back upon a work-heaped desk, that for the time being, he was quite at our service.

"Selling Difficult," suggested Livery Business. "You were, then, a pioneer in the taxi cab business?" we suggested by way of restoring the thread of conversation.

"We were one of the original group in Chicago," he returned. "I had been 'sport ed' on one of the dailies here for eleven years, until in 1907 my paper consolidated with another sheet, and we of the old guard found ourselves on the wrong side of the swinging gate."

"But, first financial possibilities of the automobile industry and already set me up in the air castle business—so when my indispensability to the newspaper world was so rudely displaced, I had to look out for myself, and cast ourselves headlong into automobile selling."

"We sold automobiles—there's no denying that. But in order to do it, we frequently had to accept in the machines that had seen more or less—seldom less—service. And these machines we couldn't sell."

"Finally, as a sort of last-resort measure, we hit on the idea of outfitting them into livery service. We had ten of them at that time, and that was the nucleus of the present company."

"Hit upon New Livery Ideas. "We realized right away that we had invaded a field of unique opportunities, in which practically no progress at all had been made over the old hack driving system, and we decided by our devoting all our energies to the livery question."

"We did away with the driver who 'just' introduced 'thank you' into his vocabulary, and finally supplied him with printed forms to be filled in with the history of his every trip, and having at the bottom, a customer's receipt for the charge made."

"Then, just as we were congratulating ourselves that we had brought the taxi driver up to 100% in appearance and manners, we discovered that we had made a mistake and had now as a class. So we adopted an appliance that limits the supply of oil to the engine, and puts anything more than legal mileage on the question. Thereby making doubly sure that employed only married men, over twenty-four years old, who had never been drivers, so that we could train them ourselves."

"Advertising Brings Success. "There were five or six auto livery companies operating here when we entered the field, but we are the only one of those original firms in existence today."

"We started with ten used cars, and today we have 140 new cabs and limousines—a string of cars over a mile long. We employ over 400 people, and have 25,000 charge accounts—which is more than half the number carried by Chicago's largest dry goods store, after several generations of effort."

"Now I said awhile ago that the livery business was dependent on newspaper advertising for any degree of success. That was the day when we started out with, and here is what our eight years' experience proves: How to Advertise Livery Service."

"There is this peculiarity about selling livery service, when a man wants a cab or taxi, he usually wants it right away. Of course, he wants a good looking cab, a dependable driver, and so forth, and it is up to the wise livery man to advertise his service along those lines until he has made his firm name just another name for 'luxury' and 'safety'."

"But the liveryman's greatest advertising asset—the thing he must emblazon and hammer at without pause or stint, is his telephone number. We've kept our number staring at the newspapers for eight years. We've advertised the luxury, safety and dependability of our service, in big space and big type—but the biggest type of every ad is our telephone number. And what's the result?"

"What would be its effect on you? If a certain number hits you between the eyes every time you open your newspaper day after day, week after week, month after month, it is bound to impress you, eventually. You're bound to read that ad to see what it stands for—and the first thing you know—that number and that name are linked for all time in your memory. And all this time, thousands of other 'you's' are doing the same thing, till, in this case, the very word 'cab' brings that phone number to your mind—a mighty good thing for both of us, every time you want a cab."

"That's one thing newspaper advertising has done for us. Here's another: Advertising Paves Way for Letters. "Get the public acquainted with your name and number through newspaper advertising, then write individual invitations to open charge accounts."

Without the advertising, they'd wonder who on earth had had the nerve to write them, if they looked at your letter at all. But establish your prestige through the newspaper first, and your letterhead invites a serious consideration of your invitation. It has secured 25,000 acceptances for us in eight years."

There are three seasons in the livery business: "Yes, of course, although they vary. Our best one, of course, is when everyone is in town, and of course we always advertise, then, and we get busy—literally, and in both directions, advertising and working, for our business has grown 20% this year over last. That's some record for advertising in a year like this. But it only goes to prove that the worse conditions are, the more necessary it is to advertise, and the harder one ought to drive it. And if the confidence that our regulars-of-old have in our advertising is creating has already increased our business 20% over last year, its cumulative benefit when more prosperous times arrive, is going to send that percentage soaring."

AMUSEMENTS

(Notices furnished by the theatres.)
AT MYERS THEATRE.

Mirth Carmen, Prima Donna Soprano of Sheehan Opera Company, Which Comes to the Myers on Sunday Evening, May 30, in Cleopatra and Cavalleria Rusticana, Tells Some Truths.

Mirth Carmen's chief charm lies in her candor. A much traveled young woman, she has gone through this vale of tears—and they are very large expressive eyes—wide open so she has seen much, both in the way of things and people. It has been her rare good fortune to have reached the top-most rung of the operatic ladder—a rarer good fortune to have done this as a native born American.

From her great store of knowledge, two big facts have crystallized and become Mirth Carmen's creed of conduct. First, sincerity; second, live. Live every minute. Energy, intensity, nerves with a magnetic personality; that via wireless send its message to you, the Carmen temperament. All and surcharges one as easily as it this an opera house. You cannot escape it, if you wanted to, and you do not want to.

"Of course, I'll wear out," she said. "I'll burn out. Since I've been a child it has been dinned into me again and again, and again—Save yourself as much as you can. But I can't; it isn't in me to have. When I sing a role, I throw my body and soul into it. I give all that is in me—every part of it, whether it be of singing or acting, and having given, I want to give more—I keep nothing in reserve for I have nothing left. I know that I'm going to give out young, but I'd rather be a spendthrift than save. I'd rather be a performance (am limp, useless, worn out, but I don't regret. I have given my all and nothing less than that satisfies me—for even if I did know how to save myself, I wouldn't do it. I don't want to save; I want to give.

Mirth Carmen and also expresses herself in regard to the American girl. "Of late the fad of repression would seem to have crept into our life. It finds its unhappiest expression in the faces of our American girls. I think, mind you, that the American girl is the best dressed, best booted, best hatted girl on the globe, but watch her any sunny afternoon on the principal streets of our big cities; from her face seems to have been massaged every mobility of expression. There is no rapturous joy in her looks. Little of the God-given delight of being alive. She is repressed. It has been drilled into her—that to show emotion is to be unfashionable—bad form. And she will go through life missing all the warm, beautiful touches. Why doesn't she live and let her face show the beautiful things that it can show? "There is one thing that is wonderful to me, and that is the touch between the artist and the audience—you feel it the very instant your foot touches the stage and you come into view of each other. There is something personal and physical in the contact—like a handshake—no, it is more like a hug, and the audience seems to say to you we love you and we hope you have something real and fine to show us—we are here to help you—that is why one should give the public always of the very best, and also one reason why I cannot help doing it."

AT THE APOLLO.

John Barrymore in "Side-Splitting Film Adaptation of 'Are You a Mason?'"

If Leo Ditrchstein's great face triumphs, "Are You a Mason?" made thousands of people throughout the country laugh until they couldn't produce another giggle from sheer exhaustion of their facial muscles. The Famous Players Film Company's five-part adaptation of this celebrated farce, starring the inimitable comedian, John Barrymore, will exert a similar or greater influence upon millions. In its simplified screen form, this convulsing story distributes more genuine humor than did even the original play. If the shrieking and applauding audiences at the Apollo next Monday, when this feature is the chief attraction, are any indication of the ultimate success of the subject, then "Are You a Mason?" must already be recorded as one of the greatest laugh-fests the screen has ever possessed.

This production, released on the Paramount Program, is certain to bring the rainbow out of the cloudiest local skies. John Barrymore's front stage there embraces Landing of Columbus, The Alamo—San Antonio, Panama and the Opening Festivities, Marvellous Ladder Act, Pueblo Village, New Mexico, with hundreds of Indian performers, Railway Station, New York Scenes, Culinary Cut and passage of first ship, Ponce de Leon Hotel, Florida, and Carnival of sports. Fearless Fills Equestrians, New England Farm scene, Suffrage Parade, National Park, Grand Canyon of the Colorado, Plunging Automobile, Love at New Orleans, Fighting the Flames, Australian Woodchoppers and the Famous Finale, The Court of Honor.

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Commanding Officer," on Wednesday.

"The Commanding Officer," a four-part film version of the celebrated play of that name, which was produced a few years ago with phenomenal success in this country and Europe, will be the feature attraction at the Apollo on Wednesday. Produced by the Famous Players Film Company, this subject must be recorded as one of the most interesting plays of recent times. The plot, rather than the exploitation of character, thought, the various impersonations, are well handled by Alice Dovey, a popular young actress who has won star honors in New York City and London, and an excellent supporting cast, including Donald Crisp, Marshall Neilan, Ethel Phillips, Olive Johnson, Russell Bassett and Jack Pickford.

"The Commanding Officer" is a strong, melodramatic, its dominant features are the intensity of passion with which several men love one woman, the effect of the narrow, gloomy conditions by a young and fascinating girl throw suddenly into the whirl of army post life and the self-sacrificing devotion of the garrison to the commanding officer.

This material the Famous Players Film Company have woven a strong and powerful film story that will interest all. It is capital entertainment, well acted, well directed, full to the brim with a feature, moreover, that may be seen twice, but that should be seen once.

SENATE ON FRIDAY WADES THROUGH FOUR DAYS' CALENDAR IN AFTERNOON.

Negro Executive Messenger Allowed to Address Senate Bill on Hambrecht Bill—Numerous Minor Bills Passed.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., May 29.—Closing a turbulent day, the senate on Friday afternoon, May 29, waded through the calendar, acting on the bills of lesser importance and putting over the rest until next week. Adjournment was taken on that day, and all of the larger bills were laid over until Thursday.

An unusual privilege was accorded to Sam Banks, the popular executive messenger, during the afternoon, when the senate went into committee of the whole, with Senator Bosshard chairman, and invited him to address the senate on the Hambrecht bill, for which Banks is principal sponsor, appropriating $2,500 for Wisconsin's participation at the celebration of negro emancipation at Chicago next fall. His reluctant appeal so effective that the bill was ordered to third reading without a dissenting vote, and would have been concurred in under suspension of the rules had quorum not been lacking by one vote.

Fight for Negro.

Mr. Banks gave a history of Wisconsin's early fight on behalf of negro freedom, beginning in 1835, when the city of Milwaukee was the scene of a riot against the negro. He said that the negro problem, not knives and razors, as Assemblyman Hambrecht also put in a good word for the bill.

With an amendment by Senator Bennett making the candidates using the pamphlet bear all the expense, the Skogmo bill limiting the campaign pamphlet to the primary election only was laid over until Thursday. The same action was taken on the Fairchild bill regulating the practice of massage and hydrotherapy, the Harrington bill repealing the law on the selection of a site for a new normal school in northeastern Wisconsin, the Hecken anti-trading bill, and the Fairchild bill exempting college-owned dormitories from taxation.

The senate passed:

Stevens—Permitting hotels disposed of bar privileges by the Baker law to renew their holdings by transfer of licenses to other locations.

Bickler—For elections in villages and small cities on waterworks purchase once each year.

The senate concurred in:

Dixie—For the appointment of photographic reporters at $5 per day for the Racine municipal court.

Schroeder—For the receiving and care of indigent patients in county hospitals.

Holm—Giving jewelers a lien on articles left for repair.

Kent—Secretary of the Milwaukee school board to receive expenses but no compensation for taking the school census.

McGowan—Requiring partition fences between farming lands of adjoining owners.

Following bills were killed, or, if assembly bills, non-concurred in:

Cunningham—For semi-annual payment of taxes.

Bray—Taxing automobiles on the weight basis ($5 for each thousand pounds).

Assembly public welfare committee—Prohibiting procurement of females for immoral purposes.

Ichabacki—Making public improvements in front of school grounds, parks, libraries, etc., subject to special assessments if such institutions have special funds for their maintenance.

Assembly committee on municipalities—Detaching territory from the town of Pilsen, Bayfield county, and attaching it to the town of Barksdale.

Bills Given Third Reading.

The senate ordered to third reading the following among others:

Berninger—Increasing the compensation of the Milwaukee county supervisors from $800 to $1,200, and making the chairman's salary $1,500.

Heidung—Prohibiting boxing contests in cities of the fourth class and empowering the state athletic commission to revoke club licenses for cause.

Assembly committee on excise and fees—Prohibiting posted persons from entering saloons.

Hambrecht—Giving cities power to appropriate money to aid in their commercial and industrial development.

Budlong—Requiring telegraph companies to send the filing time on messages.

The senate refused to reconsider, 14 to 4, the vote by which it passed the C. H. Everett bill allowing cities to establish park and recreation boards, and the highways committee bill for referendums on building bridges across navigable or meandering streams, the state to pay one-third of the cost of such bridge.

Bills Engrossed.

Bills ordered engrossed included:

Corporation committee—Providing for a board of administration to manage and control the Milwaukee county almshouse. (Three members appointed by the county board and two by the governor, appointments to be made before October 1.)

Whitman—To confer civil and criminal jurisdiction on the Iowa county court.

Judiciary committee—Reducing the fee for inspection of petroleum products from ten to seven cents per package.

Kellogg—Increasing the Ripon College corporation from 21 to 31 members.

The senate killed two resolutions designed to expedite business. One, by Senator Bennett, provided that after May 31 all new bills, except appropriation bills, be referred to committee on the calendar instead of committees for hearings. The other, by Assemblyman Harrington, would have stopped the introduction of new measures by any member or committee of either house, except the finance committee, after June 1.

The Culbertson joint resolution for a legislative investigation of the Wisconsin efficiency bureau and its publication, "Everybody's Business," the Skogmo resolution directing the Lake Superior and Mississippi river canal commission to make an immediate report to this legislature, were put over until Thursday.

Response Hearings.

The senate state affairs committee has postponed all hearings bulletined for Tuesday until Thursday.

The assembly committee on judiciary has reported non-concurrence Senator Huber's bill, 4-3, relating to the expediting of the settlement of estates.

Both houses will not convene again until Tuesday. It is doubtful if any important action will be taken in the senate next week. A large number of members received leaves of absence.

SIX DEBATES TO

CARRIERS' MEETING

12th Annual Rural Carriers' Convention Will Be oncoming at Madison Monday—Phillip to Talk.

The 12th annual Wisconsin State Rural Mail Carriers' convention will be held Monday and Tuesday at the New Park Hotel, Madison, when it is expected one of the largest delegations that has ever attended will be present. In Wisconsin there are 1,600 carriers in rural districts, over a thousand of this number being members of the state R. L. C. A. organization.

Due to the fact that the organization was started in this state just twelve years ago, the occasion this year is to be a homecoming. Among the speakers are Governor Phillip, who will address the body on Monday morning; W. G. Arle of Sturgeon Bay, president of the organization; E. L. Demarest of Waupaca, secretary; and W. D. Brown of Washington, D. C., editor of the R. F. D. News. The latter speaker will be on the program Monday afternoon.

Rock county will send six delegates to the convention, with several other carriers and their families planning to attend. The following delegates have been named from this county: George Miller, Janesville, vice-president of the state organization; W. G. Gridley, member of the executive board of this city; Charles E. Smith of this city; J. C. Anderson of Milton, county president; O. S. Kenyon of Sharon; M. L. Best of Clinton; W. G. Hungerford of Evansville, and H. A. Potter of Milton Junction.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Palmer and daughter, Caroline, the latter being composer of the national carriers' hymn, will attend the convention. Miss Palmer will take part on the program on two different occasions.

DARDANELLES COMMANDER YOUNGEST IN FRENCH ARMY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, May 29.—General Gouraud, replacing General d'Amade, in command of the French expeditionary force at the Dardanelles, is the youngest general of the division in the French army, born in Paris in 1867. He is the best known for having led the force that saved the situation at the time of the revolt at Fez. He had already distinguished himself in the Sudan, in Morocco, and in Morocco. It was he who pacified the turbulent district of the plateau of Adrar; he also captured alive the previously elusive bandit Samory.

At the beginning of operations against the beginning of the war, he was given command of a brigade, then of a corps of colonial troops. He has been wounded three times during the war, but has never ceased his service.

He is taller than the average Frenchman, wears the old-fashioned pointed beard, has regular features and eyes that indicate the cool energy he has shown in his campaign. He is grand officer of the Legion of Honor.

Save the Day!

Jim Snedeker, an East Tennessean, had been to meeting and remembered it when his mules balked at pulling the wagon out of a mudhole. "Git up thar, Buck an' Wheeler," he shouted, "an' if it wasn't the Lord's holy Sabbath day I'd kick hell outen you!"—New York Evening Post.

Saving Money on Shoes.

You can save money on shoes if, before wearing a new pair, you soak the soles for twelve hours in linseed oil and dry. Repeat the process three times.

HORRORS OF WAR HAVE NOT DROWNED BELGIAN LOVE FOR COCK FIGHTING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Brussels, May 29.—Even the horrors of war cannot drown in the soul of the Belgian peasant the joy of witnessing a cock fight. Promptly with the advent of May the old-time cock fights began again, but they had to be ordered stopped. The prohibition order, however, has merely driven the cock fighters into seclusion where they have to be hunted out by the authorities. The latter seek to stop the fights because they invite gambling and rob the farmers of money needed for other things.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Count Wants the Castle.

I SAW them board the train. In my heart there was the memory of a dozen kisses I had bestowed in repentant horror upon the hair of the Countess, who, God bless her little soul, cried bitterly on being torn away from my embrace.

"Well," said Billy Smith, taking me by the arm a few minutes later, "let's have a bit to eat and a cold bottle before we go to bed, old chap. I hope to heaven she gets through all right. I am strong for her, aren't you?"

"I am," said I, with conviction, coming out of a daze.

He led me off to a cafe, where he seemed to be more or less at home, and where it was bright and gay for him, but gloomier than the grave to me.

I drove the car home the next day. When he got down at the garage, Britton shivered and drew a prodigious breath. It was as if he had not breathed for hours. We had gone the distance in little more than half the time taken on the trip down.

"My word, sir," was all he said, but there was a significant tremor in his voice. It smacked of pride.

Mrs. Titus placidly inquired how we had got along and appeared quite relieved when I told her we had caught the train at K. Jasper junior revealed a genuine interest in the enterprise, but spoiled it all by saying that Alina, now prematurely safe, was most likely to leap out of the frying pan into the fire by marrying some blithering foreigner and having the whole beastly business to do over again.

"How soon do they go?" asked Poopendyke late that afternoon, after listening to Mrs. Titus' amiable prophecies concerning Alina's future activities and getting my harassed ear in a moment of least resistance.

"I don't know," said I hopelessly. I had heard about all I could endure concerning his lordship's magnificent estates in England, and the sort of a lord he was besides. "There's nothing to do but wait, Fred."

"She is a remarkably fine woman, but—He completed the estimate by shaking his head, trusting to my intelligence, I suppose.

We waited two days for word from the fugitives. Late in the afternoon of the second day Britton returned from town with a telegram for me.

"I have safely aboard Fondonnis, Captain Poopendyke. Clear at 2 P.M. Everything satisfactory. C. G. RAPP."

No sooner was this reassuring news received than Mrs. Titus' comment came about having her trunk packed. The entire household was in a stew of activity, for she had suddenly decided to catch the 8 o'clock train for Paris. I telephoned to reserve accommodation on the Orient express from Vienna and also to have it stopped at the town across the river, a concession secured at no inconsiderable cost.

"She was to travel once more as my mother."

"You will not fail to look us up when you come to New York, will you, Mr. Stuart?" Mr. Titus will not be happy until he has expressed to you in person his endless gratitude. You have been splendid. We shall never forget your kindness, your thoughtfulness, your forbearance. I—I—"

Upon my word, there were real tears in the dear lady's eyes! I forgot and forgave much in recognition of this instant of genuine feeling on her part. It was not necessary for her to complete the sentence so humbly begun.

Their departure was made with some degree of caution, Mrs. Titus rather considerably reminding herself that my interests were at stake. I saw them aboard the train. She played her part admirably—I will say that for her. She lifted her veil so that I could bestow a farewell filial kiss upon her cheek. Jasper junior's eyes popped very wide open at this, and as he shook my hand warmly at parting he said:

"You are a wonder, John—a sure enough wonder. Why, lang it all, she doesn't even let dad do that."

But Jasper junior was very young, and he couldn't understand.

At last we were to ourselves, my extensive household and I. Late that night I sat in my study considering the best means of reducing my staff of servants and in computing, with dismay, the cost of being a princely host to people who had not the least notion what it meant to do sums in economic subtraction. It was soon apparent to me that retrenchment, stern and relentless, would have to follow upon my wild though brief season of profligacy. I decided to dismiss the scullery maid. I was indescribably lonely. Poopendyke was worried about my pailor, my lassitude. At the end of a week he took it upon himself to drop a line to the Hazzards, urging them to run out for a visit in the hope that company might take me out of myself. All attempts to renew my work on the ill-fated novel met with utter failure. The power of mental concentration was gone. I spent most of my time in the garden.

The Hazzards came and with them the joyously beautiful Betty Billy. Poopendyke must have prepared them for the task in hand, for they proceeded at once to transform the bleak, dreary old castle into a sort of alluring merry go round, with me in the very vortex of it all. They succeeded in taking me "out of myself." I will say that for them. My spirits took an upward bound and, wonderful to relate, retained their altitude in spite of all I could do to lower them. I did not want to be happy. I figured that I owed it to my recently aroused temper to be permanently unhappy. But the wind blew another way, and I drifted aimlessly with it, as a derelict drifts with the currents of the ocean, but preferably with the warm gulf stream.

We had word from Mrs. Titus in London that negotiations had been reopened with the count and that a compromise might be expected. The obdurate nobleman had agreed, it seemed, to meet Jasper Titus' lawyers in Paris at no distant date. My chief concern, however, was for the countess herself. That she had successfully reached the high seas was apparent; if not, the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I served myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Splendid fellow," said he, with disapproving fervor; "one of the finest chaps I know, eh, George?"

"For an Englishman," admitted Hazzard.

"He's a gentleman, and that's more than you can say for the taggart of nobility that paid court to Alina Tarnowsky. He was in love with her, but he was a gentleman about it. A thoroughbred, I say."

"Good looking?" I inquired.

"Well, rather—the sort of chap women rave about. Ask Betty. She was mad about him, but he couldn't see anything in her. I think she hates him now. He had eyes for no one but the fair countess. An awful grudge on Betty. She's used to something different."

Hazzard studied the clouds that drifted over our heads. "I wonder if Alina cured anything for him."

"I've always believed that she liked him better than she cared to admit even to herself."

"I fancy he'll not let any grass grow under his feet now that she's free," said Dr. Hazzard.

"Think she'll have him?"

"Why not? He has a much better position in England than Tarnowsky has here, and he's not after her money. I hate to say it, but Alina is a seeker after titles. She wouldn't be averse to adding 'your ladyship' to her collection."

"Oh, come!" I protested. "That is a nasty thing to say, George."

"She may have been regenerated," he said obligingly. "You know her better than I do, old chap. What say?"

"I didn't say anything," I muttered. "I thought you did."

I hesitated a moment and then purged myself of the truth. "As a matter of fact, I have reason to believe she's in love with Amberdale and has been for a long time. I'm not saying it in disparagement, believe me. God knows she's entitled to something decent and fine in the shape of love. I hope he's good enough for her."

They looked at me with interest, and Smith broke the momentary silence. "Oh, he's good enough for her," he said, with a queer smile.

"I'm glad of that," I said gruffly.

"The old lad—I mean Mrs. Titus—will be tickled to death if the match is pulled off," said Hazzard.

"She was tickled the first time," said I sentimentally, and changed the subject. There was no sense in prolonging the agony.

Toward the close of their visit a messenger arrived from the countess herself, signed with the fictitious name we had agreed upon. The news she gave caused us to celebrate that night. We had a bonfire in the courtyard and drank to the god of good luck.

Cargo safely landed in New York and forwarded to the Adirondacks for storage and to await the appearance of a claimant. Former owner has agreed to accept $1,500,000 and release all claims. When are you coming over? ALROSE.

By the most extraordinary coincidence a curt, businesslike letter arrived in the evening post from Maria Tarnowsky postmarked Paris. Its contents staggered me.

John Bellamy Smart, Esq.: Dear Mr. Smart—Will you put a price on Schloss Rothoefen? I am desirous of purchasing the castle if you care to sell for the property. Sentiment moves me in this matter, and I earnestly hope that you may be induced to part with your white elephant. If you will be so kind as to wire your decision, you will find me deeply grateful and at the same time the ensuing fortnight. Faithfully yours, MARIS TARNOWSKY.

My "white elephant" was so eager to get rid of it that I would have wired at once, naming a figure proportionately low had it not been for the united protests of my four friends and the canny advice of Mr. Poopendyke.

"Soak him!" said he, and I arose to the occasion.

I waited for three days and then telegraphed him that I would not take a better less than $250,000, more than doubling the price I had paid for the property. I was prepared, however, to come down a paltry hundred thousand or so if he revealed signs of reluctance.

We built another bonfire that night and danced around it like so many savages.

Terms acceptable. Will come to Schloss Rothoefen at once to complete the transfer. TARNOWSKY.

Accompanied by Hazzard and Smith, I went over the castle from top to bottom in quest of the reason for Tarnowsky's prompt acceptance of my demand. We had no doubt that he had a good and sufficient reason for wanting the place, and but one thing suggested itself to our imagination; his absolute certainty that treasure was hidden somewhere about the venerable pile, treasure of considerable magnitude, you may be sure, or he would not have revealed such alacrity in accepting my terms. Sentiment had nothing to do with this surprising move on his part. That was all bosh. He had an ulterior motive, and it was for me to get the better of him at his own game if I could. While I was eager to get rid of the castle at any price, I did not relish the thought of being laughed at for a fool by Maris Tarnowsky after he had laid his greedy hands upon treasure that had been mine without my knowledge.

He was no fool. The castle meant nothing to him as a home or as an investment. No doubt he would blow it to pieces in order to unearth the thing he knew its walls secreted.

We spent two unprofitable days in going over the place, and in the end sank down tired, defeated and without the slightest evidence in our possession that so much as a half crown lay hidden there as treasure trove. I gave in and announced that if Tarnowsky could find anything worth having he was entitled to it so far as I was concerned, and I wouldn't begrudge him a farthing's worth.

He telegraphed that he would arrive on the morning of the third day, accompanied by his lawyer, a notary and an architect. My four guests departed in haste by the late night train after extracting a promise from me to join them in Vienna when I was no longer the master of Schloss Rothoefen. I rather relished the thought of a brief vacation.

Then, like the spider, I crept back into my web and waited for the foolish fly, knowing all the time that he would have the better of me in the long run.

I confess to a feeling of sadness in parting with the place, after all, elephantine though it was in every sense of the word. Within its gray and ancient walls that beautiful thing called love had come to me to live with me forever. It had come unbidden, against my will, against my better judgment and in spite of my prejudices, but still it was a thing to cherish and to hold in its virgin youth all through the long years to come. It would always be young and sweet and rose colored, this unrequited love of mine. Walking through the empty, dismantled rooms that had once been here, I grew sick with longing and in something like fear fled downward, absurd tears blinding my eyes. Verily, I was a fool—a monstrous, silly fool!

Tarnowsky was as bland and smiling as a May morning as he came jauntily down the great hall to where I awaited him.

"I am here incognito, my dear Mr. Smart," he said, extending his gloved hand, which I took perforce. "Sub rosa, you might say," he went on, with a very smile. "A stupid, unchivalric empire has designs upon me, perfunctorily perhaps, but it's just as well not to stir up the monkeys, as you Americans would put it."

"Our late friend, the baron, was not totally without friends, I take it," said I dryly.

He made a grimace. "Nor enemies," he declared. "Brave men usually have more enemies than friends, and he was a brave man, a truly brave man. Because he was a brave man I have no feeling of regret over the outcome of our meeting. It is no honor to kill a coward, Mr. Smart."

He introduced his three companions. I was surprised to see that the lawyer was not the fawning Schymansky and later on inquired for him. Tarnowsky laughed. "Poor old Schymansky! He is in prison."

"Aha! I am not surprised," said I. "He was my second, poor chap. It did not occur to him to run away after the—er—duel. They had to make an example of some one. His trial comes up next week. I am afraid he may be dealt with rather harshly. I miss him dreadfully. But let us come to the matter in hand, Mr. Smart. I dare say your time is valuable. You have no objection to my going over the place with Mr. Saks. I am sure. He is the architect who is to rebuild the castle for me. My attorney and Mr. Pooley, the notary, will, with your assistance, draw up the proper contracts preliminary to the formal transfer, and I will sign them with you upon my return."

"Would it not be better to discuss the question of payments before we go any further, Count Tarnowsky?"

"You will be paid in cash, Mr. Smart. The instant the deed is transferred," he said coldly.

I followed him to the top of the stairs which descended to the basement of the castle. It was rather significant that he elected to explore the lower regions first of all.

"I shall accompany you," said I deliberately.

A faint scowl came into his face. He eyed me fixedly for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and said that his only desire was to avoid putting me to any unnecessary trouble. If I cared to come he would be more than grateful.

"It isn't necessary to visit the cellars, Saks," he said to the architect. "Ample time for that sort of rummaging. I particularly want your opinion on the condition of the intersecting walls on this floor and above. My scheme of improvement, Mr. Smart, contemplates the enlargement of these halls by throwing them into one."

"A very simple process," said I, "if the whole structure doesn't topple down upon your heads while you're about it."

"I shall contrive to save my scalp, Mr. Smart, no matter what happens. It is very precious to me."

Dinner Stories

Mrs. Botts—I think, my dear, I have at last found the key to success. Mrs. Botts—Well, just as like as not you'll not be able to find the key-hole.

A southern gentleman, formerly a member of the cabinet, who was a patron of an exclusive northern hotel, and preferring not to eat at the table d'hôte, had his meals served in his own room, with all the elegance for which the establishment is noted.

Being somewhat annoyed with the airs of the servant who waited on him, he desired him one day at dinner to retire. The negro bowed and took his stand directly behind the gentleman's chair. Supposing him gone, it was with some impatience that a few minutes after the gentleman saw him step forward to remove the soup. "Leave the room," he said; "I wish to be alone." "Scuse me, sah," said Jasper, drawing himself up stiffly, but I'm 'sponsible for de silvuh."

"Now, Silas," said the speaker, "I want you to be present when I deliver this speech."

"Yessuh," he answered, and then he went to the kitchen to get a drink of water, you applaud, and every time I wipe my forehead with my handkerchief, you laugh."

You better switch dem signals, boss. It's a heap more liable to make me laugh to see you standin' up dar deliberately takin' a drink o' water."

—Washington Star.

Opportunity Ought to Use a Club. "It may be true," said J. Fuller Gloom, "that Opportunity knocks but once at every man's door, but so far as I am concerned, I must be fearfully hard of hearing, or else old Opportunity has a decidedly velvet touch."

—Kansas City Star.

Man He Didn't Want to Meet. "What sort of a billiard game do you play?" "Well," he replied suspiciously, "I can usually hold my own with any ordinary player, except the man who hasn't had a cue in his hands for three years."

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

On Saturday last, May 22, Janesville was visited by the circus known in the business as Hodgins European Show, and while it was a small affair, it was well equipped with new canvas, new seats and everything that goes to make up an ideal outfit for one of its size. But it had encountered bad weather the entire week, and as it was late in getting into Janesville, it was unable to show until in the evening.

About seven o'clock I took a walk around to the Jackson street bridge to the show grounds to look it over, and when I had arrived on the grounds until an old gentleman called to me, saying, "Is that you, Dave?"

He shook hands and was surprised to find that I did not know him. "Why," he said, "I am Con Miller, and you have paid me off many a time with the old Adam Forepaugh show, and Frank Lathin, another old Forepaugh showman, here and you must wait till I call him."

These two men were canvassers with the Forepaugh show for some years in the '80s, and are still in the business. And the old man said, "I've got broke during the week, and you have paid me off many a time with the old Adam Forepaugh show, and Frank Lathin, another old Forepaugh showman, here and you must wait till I call him."

One season in particular, we visited Canada, and went so far north that all the inhabitants were French Canadians. We many times would have to have an interpreter to help us out. Their ways and means of doing business were so primitive and different from ours, that made a good study for one who had never traveled in that country before. In that country all street hacks were two-wheeled vehicles, which I called Irish jaunting carts, and as none of those towns had streets cars, in the larger places you could see families of six or eight people coming to the show in one of those two-wheeled carts, clinging to each other, and the heavy top cart swinging back and forth like a ship in a storm, with the driver riding the horse.

The average Frenchman would bring his family in front of the ticket wagon, and smilingly point them out and hand me a five or ten dollar bill, and say, "Here, take it. One day a Frenchman came up with a large family in front of the wagon and pointed them all out to me, went after his money, when I said to him: 'Come on now, unbuckle that French and let it run and I will catch it.' But he kept on smiling good-naturedly as much as to say that he did not think that the French I learned at the old Billy school house near Judah amounted to very much, but they were nice people to deal with and they always came to the wagon with their bills made out accurately and all received, and they would receive their money and walk away, bowing gracefully, and never saying a word. This trip through northern Canada into the French country was something like this into the south for one of the large shows, for it proved a bad investment. And this was the only trip that the Adam Forepaugh show made west of the far north. In this country one could get an experience that in no other way, as it gave you a chance to study human nature among a different class of people. Everyone around the show seemed to have enjoyed the few weeks that I had put in there, except Adam Forepaugh himself, who said he had enjoyed it in a way, but the toll was too great.

And now I look as though Joe Miller, of the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West show has made the luckiest strike of the season, when he engaged Jess Willard, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, for the concert attraction. They say that in many cases six, seven or even eight thousand people have stayed to the concert only to get a look at the great fighter. A friend of mine told me a few days ago that he believed he was the best drawing card since the days of Jumbo and the Ten Thousand Dollar Beauty. Good for Joe!

Only 5% PLUS for the Best "Non-Skid"

PRACTICALLY all Non-Skid Tires that make serious claims to non-skid efficiency cost you 10% to 30% more than Plain Tread Tires of same brand and material. Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our plain tread tires.

Here's how and Why!

FORTY-FIVE years of Rubber working (in what is now the World's largest Rubber Factory) has taught us a few Kinks and Short-cuts that are not common to the Trade.

One of these now comes to the help of your Pocket-book.

Through the simple process of Thinking Hard (and being Candid with ourselves) we have found a Short-Cut to make the best Safety Tread ever put on a Tire cost us only about 5% more than it costs to make the Plain-Tread of similar quality.

Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our own or any other plain tread tires. Note the following table of comparative prices on non-skid tires. Columns headed "A," "B," "C" and "D" represent four highly advertised tires:

Size	Goodrich Safety Tread	OTHER MAKES	"A"	"B"	"C"	"D"
30 x 3 1/2	$8.45	$10.55	$10.95	$16.35	$18.10	$18.10
32 x 3 1/2	12.20	15.35	14.20	22.80	25.00	25.00
34 x 3 1/2	14.00	18.40	16.50	22.80	25.00	25.00
36 x 3 1/2	20.35	22.30	23.90	31.15	33.55	33.55
38 x 3 1/2	22.15	22.15	23.60	31.85	34.40	34.40
37 x 5	$3.90	$9.80	$11.80	$16.35	$18.10	$18.10

By testing out these Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires on a large number of Taxicabs (where they could be competitively observed and carefully checked up at the end of each day's use) and by comparing their actual performance with that of our own, and other Plain-Treads, of much higher price, we have had this fact forced upon us—

Viz:—That there is SURPRISINGLY more Mileage, in Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, than in our own, or any other, make of Plain-Tread Tires.

So MUCH more Mileage, for only 5% more Cost looked so good to us that we decided to give Car Owners the benefit.

Here's what we now offer you! The best Non-S

HIDDEN TREASURE.

Winsor Thorngate reposed contentedly on a pile of comfortable shavings in Splinter's workshop, watching his friend manufacturing a large chest. Suddenly he espied a book protruding from a pile of debris in one corner, and, interested by its appearance of extreme age, he reached for it. It was a strange looking volume with worn covers and brown-stained pages. Eagerly the boy turned to the title page. "The Treasures of Captain Kidd," he read. "Who?" was the ejaculation. "Captain Splinter, where you get the old book?"

The older boy looked up from his work. "What book?" he asked. "O, this old thing about Captain Kidd," Winsor replied. "We've had that book an awful long time," said Splinter. "Long's I can remember. I don't know where the folks got it, but it's a good book just the same. 'You bet it's a good book,' answered Winsor, and immediately he became absorbed in its contents. The reading began, and thus: "Of the seven known treasures ascribed to the pirate Captain Kidd, the one which has been deposited in American shores—only three have ever come to light. One was discovered in the year 1873 by an old Indian, who, it has been believed, had some inside information as to where to look. Another was found by a small boy, who accidentally came upon the buried chest while digging a hole by the shores of a small lake. The contents of the chest exceeded fifteen thousand dollars in old Spanish gold, besides invaluable relics of the Spanish church and the Inquisition. No one disputed the boy's right to the money and Eagerly Winsor turned a page. From the moment he had started reading he had been dead to the world.

Nearly an hour later, Splinter aroused him with a shout. "Winsor, come down town with me." For a moment, the boy did not reply. Then he raised his head, but there was a vacant, far-away expression in his eyes. He was endeavoring to collect his scattered wits, and direct them into the channels of every day thought. "Why—why," he stammered, "I don't think so. I want to read this. I—guess I hadn't better go." "The outside world again sank into oblivion."

"Aw, c'mon, you said 'you would,'" Splinter urged, but the boy did not stir. "Here, take this," and he handed a statue for all the attention he paid. "Well, you are a nice one," the older boy remarked as he slammed the door. Once outside, Splinter began to think about the old book. It had been a long time since he had read it, but he remembered the thrills which had run through him when he had pursued its pages. Winsor, he thought, would be even more excited, might even try a little treasure hunting himself. And as he thought thus, a plan seemed to formulate itself which promised ample amusement for himself and a good laugh on Winsor. For Splinter loved nothing as he did a good joke.

Winsor borrowed the book that night and read it from cover to cover. When it was finished, he was ready to believe almost any tale of hidden treasure he had ever read. It seemed that if he went anywhere and started to dig he would come upon a money chest that contained enough money to make him rich for the rest of his life. He read the treasure hunting portion of "Tom Sawyer," Mark Twain's famous masterpiece, and then began to wonder if there wasn't a haunted house in the vicinity. He could not think of any that held the reputation of being haunted, but decided that the old deserted shack in Williamson's woods would be just as good a place, even if there were no ghosts who haunted there. His musings were finally interrupted by the clock's striking half-past eight, his bed time. He could hardly wait until morning to tell Harold all about it and start on the expedition to the shack.

In the meantime, Splinter was a busy boy. When he returned from town, he went up in the attic and found some aged paper. This exactly suited his purpose. Then he poured some ink into a glass, diluted it with water, and then scraped into it the rust from an iron bar which had seen many seasons under the skies. When the mixture was stirred up it presented a muddy appearance, which entirely came up to Splinter's expectations. The boy then procured a pen which he dipped into his improvised ink, and on the paper drew a map. When the ink had dried, it appeared as if the writing had been done many years ago. The map pictured a portion of the surrounding country. Williamson's woods was shown, and also the deserted shack. A dotted line represented a track from a place represented as the town of Janesville, to one corner of the shack, where there was a cross. Some appropriate writing did the rest. Splinter eyed his work with approval.

"If that don't fool him, nothing will," he muttered, as he folded up the map and thrust it into a blue bottle he had found in back of the house. The chest was the next important thing in Splinter's elaborate plan. An old dry goods box filled that office very well. The boy filled it with old clothes and other waste matter, and in the middle he placed a wooden sword, with the word "Stung" carved on it. As he bent over the box to arrange things before putting on the cover, something dropped, unnoticed, from his vest pocket. Then Splinter proceeded to nail down the cover.

"Ah," he ejaculated, with a sigh of satisfaction. Early in the morning, Splinter shouldered the box, and carrying a shovel, started for the woods. He soon arrived at the shack, and in one corner began to dig. In a few moments a suitable hole had been made, and the box lowered into it. He then put the dirt back and tramped on it so that no one would know that an excavation had been made. It was about seven o'clock that Splinter began the return to town. He had covered hardly half the distance when the sound of boys' voices became audible. It was a high, excited, expected. He drew out the blue bottle and placed it in a conspicuous place in the path. Then he disappeared, just as Winsor and Harold, with picks and shovels over their shoulders, and came in sight. Winsor spied the bottle first. "Look," he cried. Both scrambled for it.

"It's a map," yelled Harold. "It's a map." "Wow," howled Winsor. They spread the paper on the ground and tried to catch down enough to study it. "It's at the cabin," Winsor cried. "It's at the cabin!" They started for the deserted shack at top speed. Both were too excited to talk. When they reached the cabin, they rushed to the corner, which, in the map, was marked with a cross. With the first shovel-full of dirt, wood was struck. "Whoe!" they cried, and fell to work all the faster, as it seemed to be before a sufficient hole was made so that the box could be extracted, but at last they dragged the treasure chest from its resting place. One blow of a shovel broke the top open.

There, instead of a heap of Spanish gold, was a lot of excelsior. The boys stared in a blank amazement. "It's a joke," Harold breathed. Then a glimmering in one corner of the box caught his eyes. "It was a gold watch," Winsor snatched at it. "It's a treasure after all," he cried. "See if there's any more, Harold." Then he looked at the watch he had snatched. "It's Splinter's watch," he announced, in a sinking voice. "Splinter's!" echoed Harold. "How on earth—?" Winsor was wondering "how on earth" himself. "How should I know?" he asked, rather impatiently. Then some lettering on the box caught his eyes. "See there," he cried. "It says on the box David's watch." "That's Splinter's real name," Winsor said. "Don't you see. He buried that himself. It's all a joke. He tried to fool us because I wouldn't go down town with him, and then he looked me up, and read the book, and drew the map, too. It's nothing but one of his jokes." "I see," said Harold. "Geel!" Winsor wished it was treasure! But we can sell the watch, can't we?" "No," said Winsor. "I know something better. We'll—"

And that night, Splinter, low-spirited by the loss of the watch which he had received from his parents when he graduated from high school, received a package through the mail. It was a wooden sword, with one word carved on it, and attached to it was—his watch.

When Winsor, with a sardonic grin on his face returned the treasure book, he tore it up.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

May 28, 1915.
To the Editor of the Janesville Daily Gazette:
I want through your columns to make a plea for the sick, the nervous and the tired, and ask that something be done to stop this roller skating on the walks. If the children must skate, let an hour or so a day be devoted to them and give the sick and tired a chance to get a little quiet enjoyment. Give the taxpayer or renter, as the case may be, some rights.

A Taxpayer.
To the Editor:—Perhaps very few of our citizens realize the fact that we have a society in this city called the Ladies of the G. A. R., which is composed exclusively of the wives, daughters, sisters and other close blood relatives of the boys who fought in 1861-65. This society held a very interesting memorial meeting last evening to which the Post and Relief Corps were cordially invited, but for some reason not one of either society put in an appearance. It would seem to the writer that if any society merited the hearty support of the few old soldiers still with us, it would be the ladies of the G. A. R. At the meeting last evening, Beloit Circle was well represented. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable meeting was the result.

"Quality" Has Been The Foundation Upon Which Kinnie & Son Built Their Business

Local Independent Oil Company Has Crown in Three Years From Nothing to a Patronage That Calls For 25,000 and 35,000 Gallons a Month

Three years ago about this time, the oil industry in Janesville witnesses the beginning of independent competition.

From that time on there ceased to be an oil monopoly here.
It was three years ago that Kinnie and Son opened a station for the sale of Pennsylvania oils and gasoline. Their opening was a welcome departure from trust methods.

Kinnie and Son were firm believers in the old adage that, "Competition is the life of trade," so they proceeded to supply their patrons with a high grade kerosene, gasoline and lubricating oils at reasonable prices, and to add to the life of trade that satisfaction which one feels when the goods are as good if not better than they have been represented.

That they have been successful is evidenced by the growth of their business which has risen from nothing to 25,000 and 35,000 gallons a month.

They owe their success to "Quality" upon which they founded their business—quality oils and quality service. To this they added publicity. Not being content to give "Quality" they bought space in the newspaper to tell the public about it. They realized that though they might have the best of oils and gasoline if the public did not know it, it would profit them nothing.

As a result they have won out in the face of hard competition. The demand grows greater and greater.
Kinnie & Son feature Imperial

Gasoline, Imperial Kerosene and Viscolene auto oil. All their goods are the products of pure Pennsylvania petroleum, which is the highest grade crude oil in the world.
This crude is particularly free from carbon, asphalt and sulphur which are so detrimental to good illumination, lubrication and power, and which, from the base of all crudes from the mid-continent and western fields, the products of which have been sold heretofore in this locality. There is just as much difference in the quality of kerosene, gasoline and lubricating oils as there is in flour.

The firm consists of C. J. Kinnie and Carl Kinnie, the latter being the manager to whose energetic progressiveness is due a greater part of their success. While only a young man in years he has a far-reaching foresight of business methods. Mr. Kinnie senior is not engaged actively in this business, being connected with the Smith Oil and Refining Company of Rockford.

Their offices are located at 417 South Academy street and their storage tanks are located on Western Avenue. These storage tanks have a capacity of 40,000 gallons.
Two teams and three men are constantly employed making deliveries.

Mr. Kinnie is very proud of his Imperial Gasoline which he states is the best for the maximum amount of power.

The gasoline problem is one that vitality interests all motorists, calling as it does, for a steady drain on the purse for fuel for the motor car. As a matter of fact the motorist knows little about the product except that without it, his car is useless. The point involved is that motorists are in the dark when it comes to knowing the difference between straight run and blended gasoline. There is a very great difference. In the first place blended gasoline is not giving the results and power you expect to get, and in the second place, the highest gravity "gas" is the best.

The advantages of using absolutely straight run gasoline, are that the explosion is more uniform;
and the gravities remain more uniform and that there is a smaller percentage of carbon deposits in the straight run gasoline than in the blended, owing to the fact that the latter is composed primarily of a low test benzine.

Recent distillation and evaporation tests made in Milwaukee show that in the distillation of the straight run gasoline, there was a loss of 2 parts while the blended showed a loss of 16½ parts.

In urging the use of straight run distilled gasoline, it will be seen that the jobber and dealers do so solely because straight run gasoline insures greater efficiency in power and less expenditure for upkeep.

It is therefore evident that the user purchases more real value for his money when he purchases straight run gasoline than when he purchases blended gasoline which is composed of a mixture of low grade benzine and volatile vapor condensed out of natural gas.
